Flour crust baking Bread baking can also be done as a multi-step process. However, the first three stages have the general purpose of preparing the dough for the final stage that is known as the baking stage. This stage is quite important since it is the stage where all the energy and the moisture is transferred from the dough to the outside of the bread. So, if you skip any of the following three steps then you would have to do all of them again. The first step is to divide the dough into equal parts. It is important to maintain the same weight of each part so that the bread crust does not get flattened out. The second step is to shape the dough and that involves flattening it on the table and then shaping the bread using a pattern. I recommend that you use an angle pattern because it adds to the structural integrity of the bread. The third step is to let the shaped bread to rise in warm temperature for about 40 minutes to two hours depending on the intensity of the proofing machine. If you do not use a proofer then you can place the shaped bread in a covered bowl containing cotton balls. So, all these three steps help you to create a good crust on the bread when it is finally ready to be baked. In case you are looking for a complete bread dough recipe, I recommend that you go with one of the 2 recipes at the end of this post. 4. Raw dough Freshly baked bread is one of the most sought after food items in many households. However, when
